Community Safety: What to Know in Today's Changing Times

Older generations may recall a time when doors were left unlocked. While that practice may no longer seem wise alongside today's headline news, you should have an expectation of safety and security in your community.

In these changing times, here are some things to know and consider about your family's safety.

Work and School Safety

Does your place of work have a safety plan? Does your child's school? No one wants to live in fear of the day that a worst case scenario will occur, but thinking about these matters can help protect workers and students in the event of emergency. Consider being part of efforts to create or amend actionable safety plans for the places your family spends time.

The Department of Homeland security offers free safety resources and tips for employers, workers, schools, parents and students.

Neighborhood Safety

If you're not already friendly with your neighbors, it's a good idea to develop a rapport with those who live nearby. Beyond the social benefits of having friends a stone's throw from your front door, neighbors are a natural safety net. They can keep an eye on your home when you're not home, noticing any unfamiliar vehicles or people on your property.

On a more formal level, consider forming or joining a neighborhood watch organization. A collective stake in the community can serve as an effective crime deterrent.

National and Global Safety
Individuals may not feel like they have strong roles when it comes to safety at the national and global level, but having a deeper understanding of the associated issues can alleviate anxieties and provide a nuanced look at the factors behind such threats.

For example, those interested in global terrorism can seek out new books like "Demand by Terror," the second book by Abayomi Nurain Mumuni, a fellow at the American Society of Criminology. Mumuni's second book focuses on terrorist demands. He uses case studies to build an argument in favor of negotiation strategies.

More broadly, Mumuni's books seek to raise awareness and understanding of what terrorism is and the extent of its existence. "Terrorism will not stay away from any part of the world simply because prospective victims do not know about it," he says.

Your family's safety is likely of the utmost importance to you. Take time to consider the ways you can stay safe at home and wherever you go. (StatePoint)

Crowley Announces Appointment of Queens Resident to U.S. Military Academy at West Point

Rep. Joe Crowley (D-Queens, the Bronx), Vice Chair of the Democratic Caucus, announced the appointment of East Elmhurst resident, Jaccob Louis Cortes, to the highly selective United States Military Academy at West Point. Crowley, who nominated Cortes in January, recently welcomed him to his district office to personally congratulate him on his acceptance.

"I'm incredibly proud to announce that a bright, young leader from Queens will be making his way to West Point, one of our best and most prestigious military institutions," said Rep. Crowley. "Jaccob has already experienced tremendous personal growth as a member of the National Guard, and has demonstrated an incredible commitment to serving his country. I'm confident that as one of the academy's newest cadets, Jaccob will continue to challenge himself every step along the way and further build upon his leadership skills to become an officer befitting of West Point's legacy."

Before entering the National Guard, Cortes spent time at SUNY Maritime College and Baruch College. He is a graduate of the Academy of American Studies where, in addition to his academic achievements, he found time to give back to his community. He supported literacy through his work at the Queen Library, tutored fellow students in mathematics and participated in the annual New York State Beach Cleanup.

As a member of Congress, Crowley has the privilege of nominating a limited number of residents of New York's 14th Congressional District to four of the five service academies each year. The honor of attending a service academy comes with an obligation and commitment to serve in the military for a minimum of five years upon graduation. Appointments to service academies are highly competitive, with emphasis placed on academic achievement, extracurricular activities, leadership skills, physical aptitude, character and motivation. Crowley's application period opens May 15th of each year for those candidates who are high school juniors and will be seniors the following school year, or who have already graduated.

Council Member Paul Vallone hosted a town hall with Mayor Bill de Blasio at Selfhelp Clearview Senior Center in Bayside, Queens. The town hall was co-sponsored with Assemblyman Edward Braunstein, Bay Terrace Community Alliance and the Korean Community Services of Metropolitan New York, Inc. Hundreds of Northeast Queens constituents were in attendance, addressed their concerns and shared their stories with Mayor de Blasio and various Commissioners of his administration.

"Thank you to the hundreds of residents who came out to tonight's Town Hall with Mayor Bill de Blasio. All of your questions and concerns brought to light the many issues that need to continue to be addressed while also touching on the many successes and accomplishments we have had over the past two years. I thank Mayor de Blasio for reaching out to Northeast Queens and speaking face to face with the residents that make our communities so great," Council Member Paul Vallone said.

Croci, Rozic and Colleagues Call for Immediate Action on Iran Divestment Legislation

State Senator Thomas Croci (R,C,IP-Sayville) and Assemblywoman Nily Rozic (D-Fresh Meadows) are calling for immediate passage of legislation (S6048/A9262) they drafted that would keep in place the State's previously enacted sanctions against the financial and energy sectors of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

"This bill is about ensuring New York State can exercise its legal authority in prohibiting companies from doing business in Iran's energy sector," said Assemblywoman Nily Rozic, who is the first Israeli-born member elected to the State Legislature. "In keeping existing sanctions against Iran, we are sending a strong message that the State will not stand for any threat against the security of its citizens and disruption of global stability."

The bill would build on New York's long history as a leader in applying pressure on Iran. Three years ago the State enacted legislation requiring the State Office of General Services to identify persons or entities that invest more than $20 million in goods, services or credit in the Iranian energy sector. Senator Croci and Assemblywoman Rozic's bill would prevent the repeal of existing sanctions without the State Legislature's consent.

"New York taxpayers do not deserve to have their tax dollars used to support nations that seek to boycott United States allies, such as Israel. In essence, this legislation will ultimately increase our protection as a state because we have strengthened our relationship with our ally nations across the world. I am proud to support this bill and I hope that the Assembly and Governor will act quickly on this legislation that will put a stop to state contracts and investments with those that don't support American allies," stated Senator Croci.

Increased support for the bill comes as the State takes up more efforts to ensure federal action does not lift existing sanctions. Earlier in the year, Senator Croci applauded the State Senate's passage of legislation that would expand New York's law by prohibiting state contracting with or investment in businesses or individuals that promote or engage in activities to boycott, sanction, or divest in Israel and other American allied nations.

Further, last Fall, Rozic was joined by Assemblyman Phillip Goldfeder (D-Far Rockaway) in leading a bipartisan coalition calling on the Governor to continue state sanctions against Iran. Their push came days ahead of the vote in Congress on President Obama's proposed Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action to lift international sanctions.

"Iran is a leading sponsor of terrorism as well as a major threat to global stability, and the recent Iran Deal has only emboldened them to continue their dangerous activities. When Washington fails to act, our great state must be prepared to stand up to this terrorist menace," said Assemblyman Phil Goldfeder. "The New York State Iran Divestment Act will ensure that our families' hard-earned tax dollars do not go towards Iran's efforts to undermine countries across the Middle East and threaten Israel's right to exist as a Democratic, Jewish nation. I am proud to lead this effort and I urge all my colleagues to join in support."

As New York lawmakers continue voicing concerns with Iran's pursuit of nuclear weapons and state sponsorship of terrorism, they point to the State's constitutional powers to provide for the safety, security, and public protection of its citizens and their property. The serious and urgent nature of the continued threat from the present government of Iran, demands that state, local governments and private institutions work together to ensure that Iran does that have the resources to acquire nuclear weapons capability.

and Staten Island.

In a letter addressed to MTA Chairman Thomas Prendergast, Rozic and Cusick cite similarities in their districts that create a dependency on express bus service as a primary means of commuting to and from Manhattan. With no subway lines operating in either of their districts, residents are faced with some of the challenges associated with relying on public

More Health Plan Options are Needed For Immigrant New Yorkers

Assemblywoman Nily Rozic (D,WF-Fresh Meadows) announced that she is requesting that funding be included in the Assembly's budget proposal to ensure immigrant New Yorkers can enroll in the State's newly created Essential Plan.

Enacted in 2014, the Essential Plan creates an option under the Affordable Care Act (ACA) for a state to provide federally-subsidized health coverage for low- and moderate-income people who do not qualify for Medicaid. However, current regulations do not allow immigrants permanently residing in New York to enroll creating a gap in coverage for approximately 5,500 immigrants who would be eligible.

In a letter addressed to Assembly Speaker Carl Heastie, Rozic and her colleagues are urging that $10.3 million in funding be included to cover what would be mainly young adult immigrants who have Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) status. The proposal would address some of the eligibility challenges faced by PRUCOL, or "permanently residing under color of law" immigrants who no longer qualify for state-funded Medicaid when their incomes rise.

Rozic's support on the issue builds on her outreach to Queens' immigrant community to discuss health plan changes under the ACA. Earlier this year, she partnered with the Great Commission Bible Church and MetroPlus Health Plan to discuss no- or low-cost health insurance available through the New York State of Health Marketplace.

Crowley Hosts 13th Annual Women's History Month Celebration With Special Guest Lt. Governor Kathy Hochul

said Rep. Crowley. "At every step of her life in public service, Lt. Governor Hochul has stood up for women and those in need. She continues to be an inspiration not just for women but for everyone and I'm honored to have had her join us as this year's special guest."

"Women's History Month is a time when we honor the great women who came before us and resolve to carry their legacy forward," said Lt. Governor Hochul, who delivered the event's keynote address. "It is these trail blazers, many of them New Yorkers, which continue to inspire and influence women today to make great progress across the state and nation. There is still work to be done, but there is no better time than now for women to reach higher and make the world a better place for generations to come."

This year's honorees included Bronx Council on the Arts Managing Director, Deirdre Scott; Immigrant and Intercultural Affairs Director for the Queens Borough President's Office, Susie Tanenbaum; and High School for Arts and Business Principal, Ana Zambrano-Burakov.

"New York City has a long and proud tradition of strong women leaders and each year I'm proud to highlight the women in our own community who are making the biggest difference," Crowley continued. "Whether they are directing a charitable organization, taking a lead as advocates on important issues or ensuring our youth are on a path to success, their impact is felt by entire communities."

Attendees were treated to musical tributes by students at Preston High School in Throggs Neck, as well the High School of Arts and Business in Corona. New York Botanical Garden Director JV Cossaboom opened the program.

Women's History Month is celebrated nationwide during the month of March. A champion of women's rights in both the U.S. and abroad, Crowley has hosted an annual celebration event every year since 2004.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH AT MAPLE GROVE CEMETERY by Merle Exit

March 8 was International Women's History Day with celebrations and discussions all over the world. With March being Women's History Month both noted and need to be noted women are taking place at various venues including one at the Maple Grove Cemetery located in Kew Gardens.

The 55-acre non-sectarian cemetery with a new Center and a group called Friends of Maple Grove, decided to publicize the history of who is buried there. Graves have a headstones or plaque and there are those that are unmarked. That is when the historic digging comes in. One historian Carl Ballenas has helped organize an event for Women's History Month to take place on Saturday, March 12, 7pm, with a free concert and presentation. Here is a breakdown of those being honored. Rubber chickens Marilyn and Minerva previewed some of the grave sites.

Victoria Earle Matthews, born in 1861 and brought to Maple Grove Cemetery in 1907. She was an author, essayist, newspaperwoman, settlement worker, and activist. She was born into slavery in Georgia and, with her family, moved to New York City after emancipation. She became involved in women's clubs and social work. In 1897 Matthews founded the White Rose Industrial Home for Working Class Black Girls, also known as the White Rose Mission, a settlement house for young black women, to provide them with safe housing, as well as an education and job skills.

Rosina Lhevinne, born in 1852 and brought to Maple Grove Cemetery in 1976. She attended Imperial Russian Conservatory of Music winning the gold medal upon graduation. She married Josef Lhevinne and together began a career as dual pianists. They began teaching at Juilliard School in 1924 and taught some of the most famous musicians of the twentieth century, including John Williams, James Levine and Van Cliburn who won the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow in 1958. "She was quite simply one of the greatest piano teachers of the 20th century."

Lavern Baker, born in 1929 and brought to Maple Grove Cemetery in 1997. She was a rhythm and blues singer, who had several hit records on the pop chart in the 1950s and early 1960s. Her most successful records were "Tweedlee Dee," "Jim Dandy," and "I Cried a Tear." She became the second female solo artist inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, following Aretha Franklin in 1987. Her song "Jim Dandy" was named one of The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame's 500 Songs that Shaped Rock and Roll, and was ranked #343 on the Rolling Stone's 500 Greatest Songs of All Time.

Theresa Merritt, born in 1922 and brought to Maple Grove Cemetery in 1998. She was chosen by Billy Rose, the Broadway producer, to join the cast of his 1943 musical, "Carmen Jones." She toured as a backup singer for Harry Belafonte and Jackie Wilson and sang at Carnegie Hall as part of the Kool Jazz Festival and Salute to Cole Porter. Among her New York stage roles included the wicked witch in "The Wiz," and the title role of a domineering, manipulative blues singer in "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom," earning her a Tony nomination. Theresa acted in several films, including "They Might Be Giants," "The Goodbye Girl," "All That Jazz," and "The Wiz" with Diana Ross. She is probably best known for her starring television role in "That's My Mama," an ABC situation comedy.

Helen Serger, born in 1901 and brought to Maple Grove Cemetery in 1989. Helen was born in Poland, and collected art in the 1930's with her husband, Frederick, an artist. The Sergers moved to New York in 1941. She became a private art dealer in the late 1950's. She specialized in early-20th-century European avant-garde art. Since 1964, she presented many highly praised exhibitions at her gallery, La Boetie, on the Upper East Side. She had exhibits on a number of pioneering women artists.

Kate Holladay Claghorn, born in 1864 and brought to Maple Grove cemetery in 1938. She attended Yale University and received a PhD degree. She was a author and sociologist and from 1912 to 1932 a member of the faculty of the New York School of Social Work. She held a post with the United States census Bureau and on the Tenement House Department and at one time the highest paid civil servant. In 1909 she and sixty prominent Americans leaders signed the "Call for the Lincoln Emancipation Conference" manifesto and were founders of what would become the NAACP.

Dr. Ella Jennings MacDonald, who has an unmarked grave. She had opened what was called a "25 cent dispensary" for women and children who couldn't afford a wealthier doctor. Considered a Champion of the Poor, she was married to a well-known sculptor, James MacDonald. To make a reservation call 347-878-6614.

STOP AND SHOP SHOULD BE "STOP AND CHECK" by Merle Exit

I vowed not to go to the Stop and Shop located on Atlantic Avenue in Ozone Park. I have yet to shop there without an issue. I'm hoping that my blood pressure medication gets me through the venture. At my last visit some months back, Cynthia, who appears to be the front manager in charge of the cashiers, had "assisted me". I use a mobile cart when I am shopping. Friskies cat food was on sale and due to the shopping prior, I had to get a rain check which would allow me to purchase 25 cans for $10. I wanted 50 and all Indoor Cat Food. Problem seems to be getting the ones with fish.

Cynthia, who never smiles and acts as if it is a hardship to do a favor, placed the cans in my basket as I was at the shelf. When I came home (amongst other issues), there was cans that were not Indoor.

I think I already wrote about buying flounder and first asking the guy behind the counter if I would be able to freeze the portions and telling me that it would be okay. I later realize that they were previously frozen and brought back the fish to be given a piece of paper that would credit my purchase. After getting home and looking at the receipt, I was instead charged for "squid".

Let's get back to this one. I had brought a rain check for the cat food. 20 for $9. They were having a sale of 20 for $10. The cashier did not know how to handle the rain check and called Cynthia over. Heavens knows what had to be done as it took quite a bit of time. Cynthia finished up and gave instructions to the cashier rather than complete it herself or stay there to make sure that the transaction was correct.

Next issue was that I had purchased a piece of ginger root. There was someone assisting with packaging up the food. One thing that I had also purchased was a whole chicken, which appeared to be leaking. I had asked the cashier to double bag it. The ginger root was the last to be packaged and the cashier simply told the packager to place it in one of the bags. The guy placed it in the bag with the chicken! I got home to find the ginger wet with raw chicken blood or whatever.

I then looked over the receipt quite carefully as the cashier had commented that she would simply be taking off $1 in regards to the cat food. Each can was scanned and came up at 50 cents per can. In addition there was a charge of 20 cans for $10 without a scan of the food. Nothing was taken off and $10 was added!!

I called to speak with the manager and Cynthia answered. She refused to take responsibility for anything but put the blame on everyone else. "The cashier is new"...who trains her? "I'll tell the guy never to bag your food". Who trains the cashier in regards to how food is placed in the bags? As for the putting the wrong items in my basket it was, "Don't you look to see what is going into your basket?"

I didn't call back to let her know about the overcharges and simply lodged a complaint through the corporation. Will the store wind up giving me gift card? If so, why would I want to go back there?

transit for lengthy commutes.

"When your neighborhood is only serviced by buses, it is critically important that service is reliable," said Rozic. "Any examination of current express bus service would build on the MTA's recent Northeast Queens outreach to determine what changes would allow riders less time in transit and more time at home with their families."

"As representatives for outer boroughs we understand that commuting to Manhattan is an unavoidable fact of life. However, we believe there are solutions to be found to significantly lower the amount of time our constituents spend on the bus, which can currently be up to 15 hours per week. I look forward to working with Assemblywoman Rozic and Chairman Prendergast to find DOC's Recruitment Unit coordinated the gatherings on the evenings of January 25 and February 2 at the Bulova Corporate Center in Queens. Candidates who passed the Correction Officer exam met a panel of Senior DOC Leadership, including Chief of Department Martin Murphy and First Deputy Commissioner Dina Simon along with Bureau Chiefs and Assistant Chiefs. They provided information about Department reform, job safety, and the next steps in the recruitment process.

Commissioner Joseph Ponte congratulated the candidates on passing their exam. "We are thrilled you have chosen the NYC Department of Correction as you move toward a career in law enforcement," he said. "Your interest in the Department comes at a critical juncture. We are creating a culture of safety for staff and inmates alike. And you will play a pivotal role in assuring this culture of safety grows."

First Deputy Commissioner Simon, welcoming the candidates, said: "Your future is in your hands. As you embark on the journey to a rewarding career as a NYC Correction Officer, we hope to empower you and answer any questions you may have. The people assembled on this panel have over 150 years of collective experience, and they are committed to making sure that you have all the tools necessary to navigate the recruitment process."

He is also an active member of the Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Church, where he currently serves as vice president of the parish council and has played critical roles in chairing the annual Greek festival as well as various fundraising and cultural events within the parish.

For the last several years, Rev. Fr. Dionysios Anagnostopoulos has served with enthusiasm and devotion as the presiding Priest of the Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Church of Whitestone

"The Greek-American community continues to be one of the most culturally proud and vibrant in our City, especially in my district with the parishes of the St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Shrine Church and the Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Church of Whitestone. This year I was proud to recognize George Isaakidis and Father Dionysios, two pillars of the Whitestone community. I look forward to continuing to work with the Greek-American community on issues important to them, as well as sharing with them in celebration and appreciation of their rich culture and history."

Queens Community, Elected Officials Celebrate $868 Million For School Construction to Address Overcrowding

Council Members Julissa Ferreras-Copeland and Daniel Dromm, Queens Borough President Melinda Katz, parent leaders and advocates from Make the Road New York joined local schools to celebrate $868 million in additional capital funding that the mayor has proposed for school construction this year.

Following a report by MRNY that highlighted how overcrowding in schools disproportionately affects immigrant neighborhoods and after years of advocacy by these elected officials and their Queens community allies to end the school overcrowding crisis, Mayor de Blasio committed $14.9 billion for 11,400 new seats over the next five years.

The Mayor's School Construction 5-year Capital Plan identified a seat need of 9,403 in School District 24 and will fund 4,869 seats. It is estimated that 540,000 NYC students study in overcrowded schools, and the City estimates that over 80,000 seats are needed. View More Photos

Parents and representatives from Newtown High School, Arts and Business High School, P.S. 89Q, P.S. 330Q, P.S./I.S. 127Q along with representatives from CSA, IOUA Local 94, and DC 37 Local 372 filled the auditorium at P.S. 110. The school, which opened in September after years of canvassing the area, sports a sunny atrium with Tiffany & Co. stained glass, a nod to the old factory it was built upon.

"This is an enormous victory for the families of school districts 24 and 30 who have struggled with overcrowded schools for over 20 years," said Council Member Ferreras-Copeland who oversees the Council's Finance Committee and the City's budget process, "Now that we have the money, we need to be aggressive in siting and constructing new schools in the areas that need them most. We have to make sure that children in our neighborhoods have the same opportunity for a high quality, diverse, challenging education as the children in any neighborhood across the city."

"I want to thank the administration for their responsiveness on this issue by providing nearly $1 billion in additional funding for new capacity and for increasing their calculation of seats needed to 83,000," said Council Member Dromm who, as chairperson of the Council's Education Committee, fought for the increase, "However, more than half of our schools are overcrowded and our class sizes are far too large, so there is still much more to do. I will continue to work in collaboration with the administration and Council Member Ferreras-Copeland to tackle the continuing space challenges faced by our schools.

"Classroom overcrowding has long been an issue for families living in Queens," said Queens Borough President Melinda Katz, "We must continue to build ca-capacity, which is absolutely critical to accommodating the borough's growing population. Necessary capital funding must be in place to ensure all of our kids can attend schools with high-quality facilities. The future of our children depends on government getting it right for our kids."

"It's simple: when schools are overcrowded, students can't learn. That's why I've fought to secure funding for 10 new schools in my district, as well as increased funding for school construction across the city. I urge the mayor and my colleagues on the City Council to adopt the proposed $868 million in additional capital funding for schools in the upcoming budget, so we can ensure every student has a chance to learn," said Majority Leader Jimmy Van Bramer, who represents rapidly growing neighborhoods in Western Queens that struggle with school overcrowding.

"I was always told that good things come to those who wait. Our new home in Corona is a great thing and well worth the three year wait," said Brandi Passantino, assistant principal at P.S. 110.

The TRUE FLAVORS OF THE MEDITERRANEAN

Finals Set For Sunday By Robert Elkin

At press time, the pairings hasn't been decided but the site and time has been for the Catholic High Schools Athletic Association basketball championship game. It will be held at Fordham University in The Bronx with tip off time at 3:00p.m. following an all-star game consisting of the best seniors in the league.

Any one or two of three schools depending upon the semi-finals will be in contention for top honors with the winner heading to the State tournament.

One never knows what will happen in sports. It could be any ones. Archbishop Molloy could be fighting for the title, or it could be Christ The King. During the regular season, Molloy won the Diocese of Brooklyn championship. And one can't count out Bishop Loughlin, which also belongs to the Brooklyn-Queens league.

Going into the season, Christ The King wasn't as strong as it was during past years because some of the players didn't return for one reason or another. At the same time, Archbishop Molloy came on strong and seemed to put it all together and clicked when the time was right.

Jose Alvarado, only a junior, stepped up and has the ability to become one of the best players in the City during his senior year. He was named Most Valuable Player of the Class 'AA' Division of the CHSAA. The guard, an all-around player, scored at a 15.4 rate for 13th place in the 'AA' Division. He was the top player for the Royals, and could do it 'all.'

Despite, his play the Royals just fell short this season. Molloy came back and put it all together as the coaching staff felt that these boys could do it.

Cole Anthony, a freshman at Molloy, scored at an average of 16.3 points a game which earned him eighth place in Class 'AA,' He thus earned a berth on the second team. Anthony played almost a complete game in the first contest of the Intersectional playoffs at Fordham University.

Anthony tallied a high game of 19 points, as three Molloy players scored in double figures. He tallied 12 points during the first half and then slowed down a bit in the second half. On the court he looked really good, and took down seven caroms, all off the defensive board.

Recruiters went home talking about Anthony and notes that he has a bright future ahead of him. He is definite college material. He excited the fans the way that he works the ball around besides scoring, in the victory. And he played good defense, as well.

"Anthony is a great player," said Molloy Head Coach Mike McCleary. "We got him because he knew that he went to the right school as it was a very good one for him, and he's a good student both on the court and academically. Once he came to visit Molloy, he knew that was the school for him.

He can really set up the big men on the court. He makes sure that his teammates touch the ball a lot on the court.

And one can't count out either is Moses Brown, who, at 6-11, is one of the tallest players in the league. He started all the games since the beginning of the season. But Cole is more of an offensive threat than Brown is. He shoots a lot and is an excellent player.

Tom Konchalski, Mr. Basketball, who keeps tabs on all the players in the area, for recruiting purposes, also advises the players how to better themselves on the court. Konchalski, himself, attended high school at Molloy which sent players into the National Basketball Association.

McCleary's goal this season is just to win every time that he has a game. "We have to overcome adversity and do well," he said, after the quarter final game. "I hope that we keep going."

Queens College Women's Basketball Captures Second Straight ECC Championship

In what turned out to be an ending fit for a storybook, the combined efforts of Madison, Merrick and MacKenzie Rowland lifted the second-seeded Queens College women's basketball team to its second consecutive East Coast Conference Championship over fourth-seeded Roberts Wesleyan, 60-54, Sunday afternoon at UDC Sports Complex.

As she has done so often throughout her career, Madison led the Knights in scoring with 17 points and added 10 rebounds. MacKenzie was relentless near the hoop, scoring 16 points and grabbing a game-high 19 rebounds, while Merrick connected on three three-pointers on her way to scoring 13 points.

The Knights controlled the game early on, churning their way to a 12-4 lead after a made jumper by Mad. Rowland with just under three minutes remaining in the first. Roberts only connected on two free throws to whittle the Knights lead to six after one.

In the second, Queens seized the first double-digit lead of the contest after back-to-back conversions by All-ECC performers, Kristen Korzevinski and Mad. Rowland. A spell of cold shooting ensued for the Knights, which allowed Roberts Wesleyan to creep their way back into the picture. A jumper by Taylor Bynoe narrowed the margin to two, 18-16, until a short jumper by Mack. Rowland gave Queens a 20-16 lead heading to intermission.

Out of the break the two teams traded baskets until midway through the third when a string of scores by the Rowland sisters gave the Knights a bit of separation. First it was a three by Merrick that gave the Knights a five-point advantage, 31-26, which was followed by layups from Madison and MacKenzie. A technical foul by the Redhawks' Brook Fields put Korzevinski at the line for two freebies before the sharpshooting senior returned moments after to connect on two more. Another three by Me. Rowland to close out the third gave the Knights a 45-32 lead heading into the final frame.

Queens would then score the first six points to jump out to its largest lead of the game, 50-33, with 8:25 remaining. Roberts Wesleyan did not wilt, however, quickly building momentum behind Samantha Courtney and Necedah James. A pair of free throws by Courtney made it a one-possession game, 57-54, with 16 seconds remaining. For Queens, freshman guard Kaitlyn Mahon then connected on three of four free throws to secure the team's second straight championship with the six point victory.

On the game, Queens combatted lackluster shooting by outrebounding Roberts Wesleyan, 53-43, and distributing five more assists than their opponents. On defense, the Knights limited the Redhawks to only 1-for-10 shoot-

In Celebration of "National Consumer Protection Week," Immigrant New Yorkers Host Town Hall on Consumer Fraud with Elected Officials

Marking National Consumer Protection Week, members of Make the Road New York (MRNY) hosted a town hall to discuss consumer fraud and its impact on immigrant New Yorkers. The members came together with representatives from the offices of the New York State Attorney General Civil Rights Bureau and Consumer Protection Bureau, the Federal Trade Commission, the New York City Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs, the Queens District Attorney, and the National Consumer League.

Following a year of work to understand the fraud being perpetrated against immigrant New Yorkers, MRNY members highlighted four key areas of fraud: immigration service provider fraud, housing rental fraud, employment agency and OSHA security training fraud, and multi-level marketing fraud. MRNY leaders and government agency representatives highlighted critical next steps that local government can take to protect victims of fraud and aggressively go after businesses who commit fraud.

Queens District Attorney Richard A. Brown said, "My office is proud to join Make the Road New York in observance of National Consumer Protection Week. We are committed to addressing issues faced by members of our immigrant communities and to fighting crime through education and prevention, in addition to our role in the prosecution of criminal activity. The more people are educated about their rights and knowing how to spot fraudulent schemes, the better equipped they will be to avoid becoming a victim and knowing how to take action if they are victimized."

ing from three and received a major boost by connecting on five of their own attempts. Courtney led the Redhawks in scoring with 16 points and also added 14 rebounds. Bynoe contributed 15 points as well.

With the victory, the Knights reach the 20-win plateau for the third consecutive season, and now after winning the conference championship, are in line to increase that total in the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship.

The Knights are the fourth seed in the East Region, and will take on fifth seeded Holy Family in the opening round Friday evening at 8:30 pm, in a game hosted by Bentley University (Waltham, Mass.).

Call for Better Express Bus Service in Outer Boroughs

answers for the tens of thousands of our neighbors reliant on express bus service on a daily basis," said Cusick.

The recommendations in the lawmakers' letter come from constituent experiences describing the proximity of stops that increase travel time and traffic conditions during rush hour. While the MTA is currently in the process of reviewing all bus service on Staten Island, the letter requests that a similar study be conducted in Queens to determine the effectiveness of express service during rush hour.

In addition, Rozic and Cusick are requesting that the MTA revisit the idea of constructing dedicated "park and ride" facilities for certain express bus routes. Such facilities exist as part of the Metro-North system with 34 of them in New York State. The implementation could effectively decrease commute times which can currently add up to 15 hours per week.

Neighborhoods in Northeast Queens and Staten Island commonly referred to as "transportation deserts" need investments that will positively impact commute times, frequency of service, and accessibility. The lawmakers push for better service comes in the middle of ongoing conversations regarding the future of MTA and funding for its capital projects. Rozic and Cusick want to ensure the transit needs unique to their districts remain a part of the discussion.

ever since, said, "I'm here to tell my story because it is not fair that fraud is being committed against working people of this city. No one should be in this situation. We need to change the law to prevent such abuses and work together to pursue these thieves damaging our lives and threatening the future of our children."

Maria Najera, Make the Road New York member and community leader, said, "In 2006, my husband was working in construction and his boss told him he wanted to help him get a work permit. We consulted with a lawyer who told my husband he could help open the process to get him the documents he needed through the Department of Labor and not through immigration authorities, and that he would get him a worker's permit and social security without permanent residency. Today we know this isn't a real possibility, as the only way to get a work permit is once immigration authorities accept the person's immigration status. That means from the very beginning we were being promised something impossible, and yet we were reaffirmed everything was going well by the lawyers as they continued asking for more and more money."

Francisca Montana, Consumer Fraud Prevention Program Coordinator at Make the Road New York, said, "Many government officials are eager to make a difference to stop consumer fraud. Unfortunately, many of them do not get to see the very real faces of victims—the ones who cry with their young children quietly at their sides because they have been cheated and will be homeless in just a few days, or the family that was scammed into believing that they would finally be reunited only to find out that they have lost their life savings. Today's forum was a critical step in helping government agencies and legislators better understand the day-to-day life and struggles of immigrant victims so that policies and resources can be put to the best possible use."
